The Impossible Thing We Have to Do: Empathy in the Culture Wars and the College Classroom

Molly Worthen

March 16 | 4pm
Currell College 107

Molly Worthen is an associate professor in history at UNC, where she teaches courses on North American religion and politics. Her last book, Apostles of Reason, was about the intellectual backstory of the rise of the Christian Right, and she recently published an Audible Original called “Charismatic Leaders Who Remade America” that starts with the Puritans and ends with Oprah and Donald Trump. She is also a freelance journalist and writes about religion, politics, and higher education for the New York Times and other publications.
